Numero Cromatico is interested in aesthetic experiences made in altered and modified perceptual states. In some projects, visual deprivation has been employed as experimental practice. A subject - when deprived of the sense of sight - must draw in a different way on all the other senses. The perception of time and space changes in accordance with the renewed experiential and explorative behavior.

Percorso Urbano in Deprivazione Visiva (Urban Journey in Visual Deprivation) is a project that takes the participants to an unusual exploration of the urban landscape.

The public is asked to explore the city in a given time, without being able to see. Deprived of the sense of sight, the other senses are activated differently, even the perception of time and space changes, as well as the ways of experiencing and exploring things.

The blindfolded participant is accompanied by another person that takes him/her around and traces the walked path on a given map. Once the path has been completed, the blindfolded participants produce an audio-tale of the experience.
